BRISBANE: HOUSES, GARDENS, SUBURBS AND CONGREGATIONS

Ed. Rod Fisher

For anyone hooked on the history of houses, gardens, suburbs or congregations, what other collection of papers can provide such value for money? Written by experts in each of these areas of community history, it offers 16 papers of insights into these particular pursuits.

The first section on houses, looks at interwar 'Whangerei' in Annerley as well as colonial 'Moorings' in Spring Hill. It then turns to the domestic interiors and way of life, particularly changes between the wars, which is a neglected era of Brisbane history.

The second section on gardens considers the influence of particular manuals and one early superintendent of Brisbane parks. It focuses more on specific sites, especially the Botanic and Acclimatisation Society Gardens and Victoria and New Farm Parks.

The third section on suburbs takes at least four of them into its stride, namely The Grange, New Farm, Stafford and Wilston. This supplements other BHG papers and tours on many localities of Brisbane, the latest being Ashgrove and the earliest Petrie Terrace.

Not to be outdone, the fourth section examines Anglican, Baptist, Jewish and Catholic congregations. In so doing, this augments earlier papers and tours on these and other religious denominations, institutions and sites. More case studies are provided in the reference list.

As well as offering insights into their history, this omnibus volume breaks new ground by including one introductory or instructive paper on each subject. This shows not only how to do it in terms of sources, methods and examples but also how the author actually did it – for you to do likewise perhaps.

The volume contains 324 pages with illustrations, notes, bibliography and index. The ordinary price is $40 and the price for BHG members is $30.
